PERIOD FAMILY HOME WITH INCOME POTENTIAL

Occupying a rural position on the edge of Headcorn this unlisted character home which is believed to date from the 1800s with later additions has much to offer. A fusion of the old and new, the property exhibits many period features from exposed beams to red brick floor and inglenook fireplace whilst enjoying the 21st century convenience of kitchen and bathrooms.

An entrance porch opens onto the oldest part of the house and leads to the double aspect sitting room with red brick floor, exposed beams, inglenook fireplace with log burning stove and a square bay window, and the snug/study which also exhibits exposed beams, a square bay window and a fireplace with log burning stove. The newer part of the house is accessed from the sitting room and outside directly into the family room from which additional doors open to outside; the family room opens into the double aspect kitchen/dining room with doors opening into the conservatory. A cloakroom completes the ground floor.

The first floor again offers old and new, with some rooms displaying exposed beams and a fireplace. The principal bedroom with exposed beams, floorboards and a fireplace, and the family bathroom are in the older side of the house whilst there are a further three bedrooms and the family shower room in the newer side.

A staircase leads to the second floor, contained entirely in the older part of the house and both bedrooms display exposed beams and floorboards.

OUTSIDE

A gate opens onto a gravel drive bordered on one side with lawn and the other with a charming wildlife pond. The drive provides ample off-road parking and leads to the double garage which is attached to the first of the annexes which consists of a studio/bedroom and shower room, there is an office above which is accessed via an outside staircase. The second detached annexe also offers a studio/bedroom and shower room, both are currently offered as holiday lets, providing an income stream.
